

Leuchars, Fife

Population 2,681

Leuchars is in Fife. The settlement dates from the 12th century when there was a kirkton. It gained importance when the local area was drained and the railway was built. From 1917 it has been a military base used first by the navy, then the RAF and now the army.

This type of town is characterised by its military base. This unique quality creates a remarkably small group. Employment participation is high and largely provided by the base. These towns have the lowest levels of deprivation. They are largely populated by young families. There are a higher number of women staying at home compared to other types of town and a high percentage children under five years old.

Leuchars is a dependent to interdependent town.

It is in a group of its own according to USP analysis, which combines typology and assessment of inter-relationships.
